

$2 Tuesday at State Fair

By Dom Williams
editor-in-chief

Indiana's annual State Fair took place earlier this month, and GHS Journalism students had the opportunity to attend to practice and enhance their photography skills.

Every year at the end of summer, the Indiana State Fair takes place at the fairgrounds in Indianapolis. Offering many fun activities like carnival rides, farm animal showings, and lots of food, the State Fair is always a massive hit among Hoosiers. This year the fair took place Aug. 2 - 18. The fair is often popular among families, as it is an easy and relatively cheap way to have a fun day out and about surrounded by all things Indiana.

On Aug. 13, photographers from GHS's newspaper and year-book staffs focused on capturing interesting scenes from the fair, such as animals, art pieces and attractions with different lighting situations and movement situations important to camera settings. This was "Two Dollar Tuesday," when the entrance fee and fee for food specials and attractions were offered for only $2.

The Indiana State Fair welcomes everyone to enjoy all the different activities it has to offer. The fair is held at the state fairgrounds in Indianapolis. Ava Brawley photo

Tractors are a major attraction every year at the State Fair. The tractors were located in the antique tractor exhibit right inside Pioneer Village. Leah Beaman photo

Butterflies eat lunch at the butterfly exhibit. This exhibit was located near Gate 12 at the fairgrounds. Aubreyana Costelow photo

The goat waits to be pet by onlookers. The goats first arrived at the fair on Aug. 3. Leah Beaman photo

The newborn piglets sleep in their pen. Every year since 1923, the pigs have been shown in the swine barn. Keyara Johnson photo

A vendor provides fresh lemonade for his customers. Fans enjoyed lemon shake ups offered at several food trucks on hot summer days. Tori Wilson photo

Many fair-goers placed bids on art on exhibit. Quite a few were already sold. Olivia Ford photo

The flowers are put on display in the greenhouse for attendees to see. There was a scavenger hunt in the greenhouse garden. Keyara Johnson photo

A local participant in a water game at the fair. There were rides and games for children and adults of all ages. Abigail Wilcox photo